Multiple Sclerosis

Multiple Sclerosis (MS) is a progressive, degenerative disorder of the central nervous system. MS is believed to be an autoimmune disease wherein the white blood cells attack the myelin sheaths of the nerves. The cause for MS is not clear and many possible causes such as genetics and environmental factors have been suggested theories. Poisoning of the nervous system from pesticides, industrial chemicals, and heavy metals may also play a part in the development of MS. Some treatments are used to relieve the symptoms of attack, but no cure has been found.

Lifestyle modifications will help control the disease:

- Have a food allergy test done. It is believed that food allergies may be a major factor in the development of MS
- Eat organically grown vegetables and fruits
- Avoid saturated fats
- Eat foods high in fiber
